The address of presentation was made by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and the library was accepted on behalf of the university by President A. Lawrence Lowell.

The monumental structure is the gift of Mrs. Eleanor Elkins Widener of Philadelphia, in memory of her son, Harry Elkins Widener, a member of the Harvard class of 1907, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster. Specifically intended to house the rare collection of books bequeathed to the university by Mr. Widener, the building was planned on a scale to care for the entire Harvard library, with all.

Ordinance Null and Void

The case of the City of Tonopah against Dollie Franquelin and Gerlie Williams, or, rather, the two cases tried as one, were thrown out of court by Judge Averill in appeal from the justice court of this township. This was an action for the enforcement of ordinance No. 22, which was adopted by the county commissioners, sitting as a board of city trustees, with the greatest of informality. It was evident from the proceedings that it was done in the dark, owing to there being no valid record of the proceedings.

As to the publicity which the law requires, PUBLICATION FOR ONE WEEK, the only assurance is an affidavit by a newspaper man that it appeared ONCE in his publication. The defendants in this case were found guilty in the justice court of violating the provisions of an ordinance which was referred to in the editorial columns of this paper some time ago, as forbidding, among other things, a woman to enter a place where intoxicating beverages are served, unless she goes to one within the restrictions of the red light district.
